Legacy Customer Pricing: How We Think About It

We have customers paying $47/year. Our current price is $597/year.

swipe →

Every price tells a story.

Yours, theirs, and the trust between you. When someone bought at $47, that was the deal. Changing it retroactively changes what that relationship means.

LTV trends toward infinity.

When a customer stays for years, lifetime value compounds regardless of the monthly or annual rate. Retention is the metric that matters most.

Support costs drop after year two.

Old customers know the product. They submit fewer tickets. They ask better questions. Serving them well is almost free.

A VC would say we left money on the table.

Maybe. But I can honor every price I've ever offered. That means something — to them, and to us.

Make your pricing reflect your values.

Have a reason. Be flexible if that reason changes.

But know what you stand for before you set a price — because you'll be living with it for a long time.

Follow for more honest takes on building a real business.