Your Membership Site Is Not a Blog

A toll booth isn't a membership. Here's the difference.

A blog trades content for attention.

Free content builds an audience. That's the whole model — reach as many people as possible.

A membership trades value for commitment.

Members aren't paying for more content. They're paying for outcomes, transformation, or access they can't get anywhere else.

The content is the vehicle.

Not the destination. What you're really selling is what happens to your member because of the content — and that's a completely different thing to build.

What are you actually helping your members do?

If you can't answer that clearly, that's where to start.
